

Meet Angela Moore

Angela is, among many other things, an online junky. Immersing herself into all things related to blogging, writing, social media, and connecting with others that she would not normally meet without the assistance of her trusty laptop is a daily highlight for her.

Angela is married to an Iraqi Freedom Veteran who won her heart back in 2003 when the couple exchanged vows. They have two beautiful children and live in NE Ohio. Angela has several passions in life, most of which involve sharing her life experiences with others to help them on whatever path they want to take. Angela is a writer, a crafter, a professional internet marketer focusing in link development, an avid reader, and a lover of all the little things in life that make a day worth experiencing.

About Unexpected Art: A Positive Blog

Unexpected Art has been through quite an evolution since it first launched in January of 2007. At first, it was just a personal blog about random musings, craft projects, and observations about daily life. As Angela continued to blog, she realized that she wanted to share her passion for being positive in a world where positivity is often laughed at, dismissed, or found to be unnecessary. The point of this positive blog is to give people tips on how to be positive, share positive stories, participate in memes to meet new people, and in general, be a bright spot on the internet.

All of this is an avocation. Angela is a full time internet marketing professional, focusing as a Link Development Specialist. The response has been tremendous. If you have suggestions, you can always contact Angela and let her know your thoughts. So look around, make yourself at home, and join Angela Moore on this amazing adventure of finding the good things in life.

What Angela Moore Does as a Positive Blogger

Angela is more than willing to contribute guest posts on the topics relevant to the content within UnexpectedArt.com. Angela also occasionally does public speaking engagements on the topic of positive living. This can include webinars, teleseminars or in person speaking engagements with ample notice. She is more than willing to contribute to positive discussions on life, motherhood, women's issues, books, and more. Angela is also open to reviewing products when it makes sense. This includes products related to blog content, books, ebooks, and others.
